Garba nights make a grand return in Gurgaon

Divya Kaushik

From setting up a huge pandal that can accommodate hundreds of guests, a shopping arena, food carts and a grand stage, to rehearsing for hours each day on Bollywood dandiya tunes, Gurgaon societies and residents are ensuring they celebrate Navratri with a bang. After a two-year break, garba nights have made a comeback at societies in Gurgaon, while residents are participating with gusto. While last year, most societies celebrated the festival virtually, this year, most are planning extravagant dandiya nights, that they promise will be unprecedented in scale and enthusiasm.

'People are not leaving any stone unturned this Navratri'

Most of these dandiya nights at different societies will be held over the weekend and preparations started over a month ago. "Gurgaon has over 2,300 societies and we started getting enquiries for organisation of society garba events in September. This year, we are organising dandiya nights in over 10 societies and most of them are hosting their events over the weekend. From our experience of organising these events at different societies over the years, we can say that this year, celebrations are definitely grand. People were waiting for this festive season to celebrate and they are not leaving any stone unturned to make dandiya events more entertaining and experiential for guests," says Ajay Kumar Singh, CEO of a facility management company, which is helping many societies organise garba events this year.

SPECIAL SECTION FOR FESTIVE SHOPPING

For those who might not be performing or dancing during the garba events, there are a lot of other activities planned. Almost every society will have a shopping arena with craftsmen, home chefs and others displaying festive decor and goodies. "We will have stalls where residents can enjoy festive shopping. The idea is to have a variety of activities to interest people of all age groups. We are hosting one of the biggest dandiya nights ever and I have also invited my family and relatives from other cities to attend it," says Suchi Sharma, a cultural director and resident of a society in Sector 58, Gurgaon.

"There are some societies that have invited craftsmen from other cities to put up stalls. One of the societies will have Kashmiri sellers," informs Ajay Kumar Singh. Many societies have invited dance troupes from Gujarat to their events for that extra traditional touch. "We will have a Gujarati troupe take to the stage before the residents' performances to add a traditional touch to the event. This will be followed by a DJ playing Bollywood music. The dance performances will go on till 10pm," says Rashmi Grover Das, accessory designer and a resident of Sector 67 in Gurgaon. Pallavi Sharma, an entrepreneur and resident of Sector 90 in Gurgaon, adds that a grand stage has been set up this year for their garba night. "We will have Gujarati dancers performing at the event and a percussion artiste has also been invited to perform before the DJ starts playing. Residents have been preparing for their performances for dandiya nights for over a month now."

INDULGE IN CHAAT, MITHAI AND DIFFERENT CUISINES

No celebration is complete without food and for garba events, societies have planned a multi-cuisine menu with special emphasis on chaat and mithai. "Food has always been a speciality at our garba events and this year also we are going to have counters with chaat and mithai. It will be an extensive menu with different cuisines," says Rashmi.
